"Of course, if he had gone mad, he may be somewhere. But if he was robbed, I think he has been done away with because he wouldn't let anybody get his money away from him without a fight. Maybe they had to kill him to get it."

The missing youth was of average size, five feet three inches tall and weighed 150 pounds. On the day of his disappearance he had worn $500 from the margin bank, and something he intended to use with his old car in payment for a new one.

NEW SOLUTION OFFERED FOR HUB'S TRAFFIC PROBLEM

PROPOSED TUNNEL UNDER BOSTON COMMON

A vehicular tunnel, a motor roadway over the present elevated structure along Atlantic Avenue between the North and South Stations, and public parking facilities under Boston Common, the latter planned above, were recommended by Warren E. Locke before the Legislative Committee on Motor Traffic. In the opinion of Mr. Locke, who has spent the last ten years studying traffic problems, railroads should be motorized. Connections with office buildings from the proposed tunnel would be made at private expense. If the recommendations of Mr. Locke are carried out, "to provide for a subway for the exclusive use of vehicles under Beacon Hill, Boston Common and the public gardens, with a westerly terminal at Commonwealth Avenue," is one of the hopes of Mr. Locke.

a lunch pail and coffee jar, but did not see the prisoner take refreshment.

Q—"Didn't you say to Amaral, asked Attorney William T. Tracy, cross-examination, at the close of your examination?" I'm going to put you up tomorrow for this murder?" A—Yes.

WOMEN EXCLUDED

Q—"And didn't Amaral reply: 'Don't care what you say, I didn't do it'?" A—Yes.

Women spectators who reached front seats in the rush were excluded by Judge Hahn after the second round of testimony. After twenty minutes, the order, like that of last week, was due to testimony concerning Amaral's episode with Miss Cawwell of Riverside, whose acquaintance he made on a street corner in the neighborhood of the opening of the second week of the trial.

Women spectators who reached front seats in the rush were excluded by Judge Hahn after the second round of testimony. After twenty minutes, the order, like that of last week, was due to testimony concerning Amaral's episode with Miss Cawwell of Riverside, whose acquaintance he made on a street corner in the neighborhood of the opening of the second week of the trial.

Attorney Tracy cross-examined Judge Hahn's witness in detail concerning the police "line-up" when Miss Isabel McConnell, an East Providence neighborhood resident, was brought to police headquarters to identify Amaral.

Amaral was second in the line made up of the police chauffeur, several neighborhood residents, and a testified Chief Ahern. "Miss McConnell looked at those in the line and picked out Amaral. When she came out she said, 'The second fellow looks like the fellow who was driving the car that I saw the Commie girl get into.'"

"RESEMBLED THE MAN"

"I asked her if she was sure and she replied, 'I couldn't swear it was him, but he resembled the fellow, he was the same type.'"

Q—"After Miss McConnell had looked over those in line and had come out, didn't you, Chief, that Edward Farrier, a twelve-year-old boy from East Providence, was taken to view the lineup with his father?" A—"I don't recall that he was."

He had the vital to his lips and was draining the contents when Officer Bryant, calling to the inspector waiting in another room, leaped at him.

The two grappled and were joined by the inspector to the furious battle. When they succeeded in overpowering Bryant, he had taken almost every drop of the poison.

He was taken to the Quincy Hospital, but was dead on arrival.

MALDEN WOMAN QUITS ELECTION FIGHT TO NURSE HUSBAND

POSSESSES OUT TO HOME

Mrs. Harwood Doesn't Care Whether She Is Elected While He Is Ill

Three days before the election of Malden city officers, Mrs. Martha Harwood ceases her active campaign for election to the Common Council from Ward 4. The reason is that she feels her home needs her.

Though for twenty years a member of the Women's Suffrage League, Mrs. Harwood is still a believer in the old maxim that "women's place is in the home."

KEPT TOO BUSY. "I am too busy at home to think about the election now," she says. "My husband's illness has occupied all my time and thought. I don't know care whether I am elected or not."

Until the illness of Mr. Harwood last week, Mrs. Harwood was carrying on an interesting post card and telephone campaign. Members of her committee invited her to a dinner at the home of Senator Illsley, Mrs. J. V. Kinball, the wife of Malden's Mayor and Mrs. C. L. Leach, whose husband is president of the City Council. Besides flooding the mails with postal card announcements of Mrs. Harwood's candidacy, these women undertook a campaign of telephoning which covered the entire city.

The last minute withdrawal of Mrs. Harwood from active campaigning will, it is thought, affect her probable election.

WOULD NOT BE MAYOR. She would be the third woman member of the Common Council and the first to enter that body from her ward. For several years Mrs. Harwood has been invited to become a candidate for the office, but has refused to enter active politics until familiar with the workings of the council. She feels that women are inclined to be too ambitious in their political aspirations seeking offices which they are not qualified to fill.

"I think that women can be a help to men in politics," says Mrs. Harwood, "but they should be content to start with the details. It is a mistake for a woman to run for mayor in a city before she has held any minor offices."

SCORES BOOK THIEVES AT HARVARD

Crimson Opens Editorial Campaign Against Marauders of College Library

Harvard University, home of culture and high learning and the oldest street school, numbers book thieves among its students.

No less an authority than the Harvard Crimson is responsible for this accusation. In its edition, today, the Crimson comments editorially on the report of W. C. Lane, librarian of the Widener Library, against the custom of students who remove books needed in various courses.

According to Mr. Lane, the books disappear just before they are wanted by students in connection with certain courses of study. Sometimes they are returned, but at other times they are not.

Not only do enlightened Harvard students stoop to petty larceny, but they are also guilty of defacing books, according to Mr. Lane.

THEY ARE SEIZED

Referring to Librarian Lane's report, which was characterized as extremely moderate, the Crimson said editorially:

"The student body is aware that some users of the library are robbing the staff by means of annoying practices. The whole matter of book thefts, from the removal of books and papers to the temporary removal of books and read, has been a low low consideration of others and too greedy of their own convenience."

A few book libraries should not be from robbing the mutilation is only to be expected, but that a college library should be victimized in this manner is the sign of the university.

CARRY BOOKS AWAY

In his latest Librarian Lane said the principal difficulty was due to the fact that a comparatively small number of students do not hesitate to carry away books when they can do so unobserved, and they do it at critical hours.

The instance, which requires a course of action which requires the reading of certain books of reference, one or more of these books disappear. Students who are taking this course are therefore unable to obtain the books needed for their course.

Another cause of complaint, according to the librarian, is that students sometimes take books from their own in taking books from the library. This is not common, however, as offenders when caught are expelled.

Reveals Secret of Perpetual Youth

THE SECRET OF PERPETUAL YOUTH—What woman doesn't want to know it?

An active little woman, rumored to be fifty, recorded to be forty, claiming to be thirty-five and appearing somewhere around twenty years of age—has straggled away the mystery. She is Anna Pavlova, premier danseuse of the world, a veritable young womanhood at an age when most women are fighting desperately to ward off the approach of age.

Pavlova and the late Sarah Bernhardt stood out as the two famous women of the world possessing the secret of perpetual youth. "New Pavlova in the following article, first of a series, reveals the secret to all women."

By ANNA PAVLOVA
World's Most Famous Toe Dancer.

Most women will not take my advice on keeping young. They will not put themselves in the right mental attitude. At least fifty per cent of keeping young is mental. It is a matter of mind, not exercise or muscles work.

In my own case, long ago I made up my mind that I was not going to grow old and fat; that I was not going to have a double chin when I became forty. I made up my mind that Anna Pavlova was going to be just as much a girl at forty as she was at twenty.

That was the start. Now a woman cannot stay young if she does not have some other interest beside herself. She must get away from self interest. She must have something else to throw her whole soul into. And that is the secret of perpetual youth.

At three o'clock on the wonderful art of dancing. I did not work and work to keep young. Anna Pavlova is the greatest dancer in the world, and then at dawn, breathe a

ASSERTS TOWN OF ORANGE IS NEAR 'BROKE'

Officials Are Eager to Obtain $10,000 Back Taxes From Big Local Industry

The town of Orange is practically bankrupt. This condition was revealed today during a hearing before Judge George W. Anderson in the U. S. District Court of Appeals in the bankruptcy case of the New Home Sewing Machine Company.

This company, the principal industry of Orange, employing 400, has been in the hands of receivers a year and nine months, and is just getting back on its feet.

It is Anna, Orange town council, has petitioned Judge Anderson for an order compelling the receivers to pay the town $25,000 due in back taxes, the charge Orange is to be virtually insolvent. It said $10,000 is still due for the year 1922, $10,000 for 1923 and $10,000 for 1924. It urged that $10,000 be paid at once, as the town has borrowed to the limit, and has accumulated funds just yet due.

Judge Anderson expressed amazement at the condition revealed, and asked Receiver Charles N. Stoddard if he could pay the $10,000.

Stoddard said that $25,000 is tied up in Merchants' National Bank of Boston by creditors and suggested if it were released it would solve the problem.

Last Night

—BY THE LISTENER—

Local fans had another new feature added to the already well provided repertoire of the local stations. This was in the nature of the day Hot Theatre program, broadcast by WEEL. While many of us have, of course, heard "Hotie" before from the outside stations, there are, nevertheless, thousands of crystal set owners who enjoyed that thrill for the first time last night. Hotie apparently was somewhat concerned over the importance of having two new stations added to his weekly lineup. He said in his opening remarks that he hoped WEEL and WDBH (Worcester) would find the program enjoyable. There is no doubt but that this man has an unusual radio personality. To hear him over the stations some distance away, as compared with our WEEL, the force of his personality doesn't seem so strong. But from a local station nothing is lost—not even the most intimate inflection of the voice. It sure was food in every detail. May WEEL continue the good work.

The evening offering from WNAE was the evening service from the Christian Science Church in Rock Bay. This broadcast terminated a rather strenuous day for WNAE. In the morning they broadcasted a rather lengthy program, consisting of the Ede memorial service, from Lowell's Little Theatre. This was a really impressive affair, and its abundant supply of musical offerings made it exceedingly well adapted to such a broadcast that would appeal to the general radio audience. During the afternoon I enjoyed another of WNAE's Old South Forum broadcasts. This was also made doubly interesting by generous supply of good music furnished by the Jordan Trio.

REM sent this Eagle Scout's cough flying—

An "Eagle" Scout's rank is the highest rating a Boy Scout can earn.

Alfred Martel of 15 Sturgis St., Winthrop, Mass., made the grade and won quite a crop of medals and decorations while doing it. But even an Eagle Scout gets a cough once in a while.

Now Alfred's coughs don't worry his mother as much as they used to, for she keeps a bottle of REM handy.

"My boy Alfred," says Mrs. Martel, "had a bad, annoying cough this past winter. He's a great one to catch cold, as he's out in all sorts of weather.

"I tried some different things for it, but it still hung on. Then some friends of ours recommended REM to me. I'd seen a lot of advertisements about it, so I thought I'd give it a try. I got a bottle at Stover's Drug Store on the corner and it relieved him very quickly."

In this climate few of us are lucky enough to escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't escape them, we can help to get rid of them quicker. A bottle of REM has quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM—effective, harmless—is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the sore, inflamed membranes.

No Opium in REM. And pleasant to take. Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. And you can have your money back if you want it—but you won't!

Introductory size bottle, only 60c

CLARK GRIFFITH GOES AFTER SCALP OF BAN JOHNSON

Moe and Joe They Get the Dough--- Sometimes

TURMOIL EXPECTED AT SESSION

By DAVID J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

New York, Dec. 8.—Indications today were that Commissioner Kewas M. Landis would enter the "ring" this week a 10 to 1 favorite over battling Ban Johnson in a bout of undetermined length in which the dictatorship of baseball is at stake. The batter will carry a big advantage in weight but the Commissioner packs the punch and his poundage is better distributed.

The records of the two principals show that Landis already has scored a few of his opponents in the past. The third is due on Wednesday when the American League holds its annual meeting. On that occasion one of Ban's former seconds is alleged to be ready to land a punch from the clubhouse.

"OLD FOX" BACKS LANDIS

"Old Joe, Ban," is the late John O. Chase is credited with having said on a certain historic occasion. "Just what the batter will say to Ban," Griffith, Washington owner, under similar circumstances, remains to be seen. Griffith, they say, will introduce a resolution offering a vote of confidence in the Landis regime and, if the latter doesn't like it, he may find himself relieved of his post as president of the American League, in which case, it is believed, Ban's career will be continued for the duration of the season. The result of the great service has rendered Banish in the past.

The resolution, according to reports which followed an informal meeting of American League owners at Hartford last week, virtually will be a unanimous one. Phil Hall of St. Louis being the only member still trailing with Johnson. It is said, Phil to quote Bill in St. Louis, but he represents in likely to cast a contrary vote.

NATIONAL WITH JUDGE

As for the other Griffith is alleged to have told "Ban" Harman to inform the National League that the indictment of Landis is a conspiracy. Clark secured on Ban when the latter attempted to discontinue the first world series baseball season, following the Ban O'Connell case.

The National League, according to Harman, will take no vote on the subject. He claims that the originator has been with the Judge, the first and, therefore, none can run who it should result early. But by two-thirds of Pittsburgh became a trifle because at the recent session because the Judge treated him with alleged disrespect, but it is understood that Harman has forgiven him.

It is understood, also, that some of the majors have even gone so far as to execute the same against the Pacific Coast League, which has become somewhat weakened by Johnson's charge that the league was rampant throughout its circuit last season. The charge, it is now alleged, had its basis from reports appearing in newspapers Johnson happened to read.

All in all, it looks a long week for battling Ban.—That is, if he can make it so and be probably will. The odds now will be 10 to 1.

WHAT IS IT WORTH?

It Has a Cash Value

No matter what condition it is in, it has a value, we will buy it. We are doing this to induce you to come in and see the wonderful ready-finished Topcoat Overcoat and Great Coat—English models. They are all ready for you to ship on and walk off in.

These coats were made by our regular tailors, during their spare time, giving them continuous employment. We are now specializing on these coats as we have on "Thin-Tailor" coats, so successfully, as you know.

We will take your old coat, allow you what it is worth and apply it on the new. Prices of our coats are just the same whether you pay in cash or trade in your old coat. We do not expect to make a great deal of money on this transaction, but to introduce our Ready-To-Wear Overcoats.

Only a limited number will be taken in this way. This offer may not be made again this year.

Moe almost dropped over another long bird Saturday. He planted his sack on Dandy Brush, a 5 to 1 shot, and the gander finished third after leading in to within a few yards of the finish. CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beckman
DEAR MRS. BECKMAN:
Will you please tell me how long to wear a mourning veil over the face for my mother. I claim three months, but friends tell me I must wear it six months.
(C) Also how long do I wear it broken back over the head? At 31-32 NOWADAYS a mourning veil is not worn over the face except for the funeral. And I think it is a very kind, polite-don't you think to the wearer and to the observer?
(C) If you maintain "dear" mourning, you wear it about six months. Mourning is not very heavy now, and except a wife for a husband, once a long veil is not worn at all. You really do now as you feel like doing—whatever makes the grief lighter is good form, and this seems very reasonable and sensible.

FAMOUS FIRSTS

THE English language is known as the language of poetry, as French is known as the language of great prose. And the father of English poetry is Geoffrey Chaucer, the robust, hearty human writer of the Canterbury Tales. There is no exact way of tracing the dates and events of this great poet's life, although in a day before the dawn of writing biography and autobiography, from various records of the time we gather that he was born about the year 1340 in London.

His father, John Chaucer, was a wine merchant and it is evident that the young Chaucer was a family of means. He received the education of a gentleman. It is not known whether he was a student at Oxford or Cambridge, but suffice it to say that he is claimed by both universities. Early in life Chaucer was associate of nobility and a great favorite at the court of Edward III, and when he was taken a prisoner in France while in the service of the King, his Majesty, himself, contributed eighty dollars, then a fabulous sum of money, for Chaucer's ransom.

His friendship for the king's son, John of Gaunt, whose brother-in-law he later became, through his marriage with Blanche of Lancaster, was a factor in the way of many royal favors. He held various posts in the service of the king and went abroad on different times as ambassador.

It is thought that on one of these missions he visited Italy, he met Boccaccio, the great Italian poet and one of the foremost figures in the Renaissance. The movement which brought a rebirth of interest in art and learning, Chaucer took to heart. Daily brought Chaucer in contact with influences which were later reflected in his work.

The development of Chaucer's genius has been summed up as a combination of French, Italian, French, and English.

There is a rough approximation to the time of Chaucer's life in the earliest poems are translated from the French or based on French models. The Roman de la Rose, taken from the French of Guillaume de Lorris and Jean de Meung, belongs to the time of Chaucer's life.

Chaucer's famous "Troilus and Criseyde" is based on a story by Boccaccio, but he did not follow the Italian step by step as a mere translator. The character of Criseyde is his own creation, and the treatment of the story is his own.

The full flowering of Chaucer's genius came in the last period, the "Canterbury Tales." The "Canterbury Tales" is a collection of stories told by a group of pilgrims on their way to Canterbury.

TOM LAWSON CLEANED UP ON CARD GAME NOVELTY

which had enjoyed a monopoly of the playing card field. The Lawson Company, noting the success of the new intruder, took offense at his temerity, and sought to crowd him out.

It is questionable whether in later years and under similar conditions, the Lawson Company would have followed the course they took. When Lawson then did not have his reputation made as a vindictive retailer, he was a man who picked out his mark and fought his way to it, crushing down all obstacles.

Had the Lawson Company heads realized the extent to which Lawson would go for furthering his ends, especially against persons who had incurred his enmity, it is likely that the concern—in reality a trust—would have confined its tactics to endeavoring peacefully to buy Lawson out rather than squeeze him.

Lawson, in common with his usual practice then and later, was playing a lone hand with his baseball card. He had cornered, a matter of personal protection, but he was the whole works—luck, stock and barrel—reared, trained, the full strength of the playing card trust.

He did not shy away from the odds, however, he began to manipulate Lawson stock, also using thousands of dollars into newspaper and other advertising, toward this end.

The advertisements purported to inform the public of the true nature and condition of the Lawson stock, which Lawson painted as black as possible. In his battle, "T. W." eventually secured the sympathy and powerful aid and support of Joseph Pulitzer and his New York World.

This newspaper sent editorial broadsides after editorial broadsides against the Lawson trust—broadside with telling effect. Soon the concern emerged. It became in such desperate straits that its heads, as a last resort, endeavored to have Lawson and his underlings indicted for fraud charges.

Ultimately an indictment was returned by a Grand Jury sitting in New York. But it was not returned against Lawson. Instead it was against his secretary, William L. Vinal. Further warfare along the line was blocked, however, when Governor Brackett of Massachusetts refused to issue extradition papers that would allow of Vinal's being taken out of the State.

Pointed in this juncture, the savvy stockholders of the Lawson Service Company, during a meeting at Lowell, turned on Lawson himself.

"Crush Lawson down and put him out of the playing card field or get out of the Lawson Company yourself," was the sense of the ultimatum they delivered to their head.
